1. How many anticipated attendees and from which sectors are they?

More than 2,500 invitations will be distributed to individuals from military, police (federal, provincial, local) corrections, wildlife & conservation, armed government services, public safety and security. We anticipate approx. 700 attendees with approximately 41% from Law Enforcement (federal, provincial, municipal), 33% from Canadian military, 11% from Government agencies, 5% from Corrections and 10% other groups such as EMS and Fire.

2. Is this event in the interest of the agency? Will it further agency operations and programs?

For over a decade, the purpose of Rampart Range Day has been to showcase and provide hands-on experience to end users, purchasers and program managers in the tactical community. Rampart Range Day differentiates itself from other similar events in Canada by focusing on several key elements:

Exclusivity: Our event is only open to active serving first responders and Military who operate in a tactical capacity.

Quality training and demonstrations: We offer open area training and workshops lead by our vendors and Rampart subject matter experts. Attendees get a unique opportunity to learn more about the practical application of the products while getting hands-on experience on the range or in an open demonstration area.

Active firing ranges: Many of our vendors will be running range bays to explain and let attendees try their products first-hand.

Diverse product line representation: For 2022, we are expecting over 70 vendors from around the world. Range Day brings in high-end and innovative brands not just from North America, but from Europe and beyond. Our event brings in these leading-edge specialty brands in an effort to provide unique exposures to our attendees.
